Stopping Adobe Illustrator Adobe Illustrator is a powerful vector graphics program that enables you to create professional-looking illustrations, such as logos and graphic designs, that are highly intricate and detailed.

It's also a great tool for creating images that are text-based. In fact, Adobe Illustrator's strongest feature is its versatility, so its versatile nature may actually be the program's downfall. In the programs that I describe in this chapter, you begin with a blank canvas and all the tools you need to create your design. Illustrator, on the other hand, offers you thousands of options, including multiple layers and multiple paths. In addition to all the amazing illustrative features, there are a variety of tools that enable you to add and manipulate text, shapes, and color.

What's New In?

AUSTIN (KXAN) — The Texas Senate Committee on Agriculture is looking to change the definition of what constitutes a "seeded crop," changing the definition of what is permissible within the state. This bill would make seeds harvested with no chemicals — no matter how little effort is involved in harvesting — legal for sowing into another farmer's field. The bill has two major changes: Ways to declare a small scale, "seeded crop" include "harvested by a family farmer," "harvested by the family farmer's helper," "harvested by the farmer's neighbor," and "harvested on-site by a family farmer" (Page 4-5) The Texas Department of Agriculture will ask farmers to pick up a U.S. Department of Agriculture certified seed lot, and then sign a contract with the person they want to sell their seeds to, which spells out the terms of the sale The proposed bill would also create a Seed Certification Office within the Texas Department of Agriculture, and mandate that, "the identification of the seed lot comes from those records that are maintained by the department and the seed labeled with these identifiers. The seed lot shall be stored in a seed repository" (Page

5) "The bill is a matter of fairness," said Senator Jason Villalba, R-Dallas, who is sponsoring the legislation. "This bill … doesn't increase our security, doesn't increase our access to crops, and doesn't increase our agriculture. It's a matter of fairness." Senator Paul Workman, D-Austin, who is also a farmer and opponent of the legislation, said the main reason he's skeptical of the bill is this loophole is being used as a way to allow less-than-legal use of seed. "If we think about the law right now, you have to purchase a U.S. Department of Agriculture certified seed lot," he said. "What this bill does is allows a family farmer to go, without purchase, essentially without license, have that U.S. Department of Agriculture-certified seed lot and go and sow it into somebody else's field." For years, Workman said, seed banking and exchange programs have supported
